SINGULARITY

Global Business Conduct Policy

Integrity. Respect. Accountability.

Applies to: Directors, officers, employees, temporary staff, and contingent workers of Singularity and its controlled entities. Relevant expectations also apply to business partners as provided in contracts and applicable policies.

Policy owner: Ethics & Compliance (interim designation)

Version: 2.1 | Effective date: Upon formal approval

Review cycle: At least annually and when material legal or business changes occur

Approver: [Board / authorized executive — complete before adoption]

Organization-wide baseline policy. Local legal review and jurisdiction-specific supplements are required before adoption.

1. Purpose and commitment

Singularity is committed to conducting business lawfully, ethically, safely, and with respect for people and the environment. Trust is earned through honest decisions, responsible products and services, fair dealing, and a willingness to raise concerns. This policy sets minimum expectations for how we work and how we represent Singularity.

Every person covered by this policy is responsible for understanding it, completing required training, asking for guidance when uncertain, and speaking up about suspected misconduct. No business target, customer request, instruction from a manager, or short-term advantage justifies violating the law or this policy.

2. Scope and relationship to law

This policy applies worldwide to Singularity directors, officers, employees, interns, agency workers, and other individuals working under Singularity's direction, in every work setting and business interaction. Managers must reinforce these standards. We expect suppliers, consultants, agents, distributors, and other business partners to meet equivalent standards where appropriate and required by contract.

Follow applicable laws, regulations, permits, contracts, and this policy. Where this policy sets a higher ethical standard than local law, follow the higher standard to the extent legally permitted. Where requirements conflict or are unclear, stop and consult Legal or Ethics & Compliance; do not choose a path that violates local law. Local policies, collective agreements, and mandatory employee rights remain in force. Nothing here limits legally protected rights to organize, bargain collectively, report concerns to authorities, participate in investigations, or make disclosures protected by law.

> Important: This baseline cannot itself guarantee compliance in every country. Employment, privacy, reporting, data-transfer, competition, tax, sanctions, and other rules differ by jurisdiction. The responsible local legal team must add or adapt requirements before implementation.

2.1 Interpretation and definitions

In this policy, "Company" means Singularity and entities it controls; "Covered Person" means anyone within the scope in clause 2; "business partner" includes a supplier, vendor, consultant, agent, intermediary, distributor, joint-venture partner, or other third party acting for or with the Company; "public official" includes employees and representatives of governments, political parties, public international organizations, and state-owned or state-controlled entities; "personal data" means information relating to an identified or identifiable individual; and "work-related event" has the broad meaning described in clause 11.

"Must" and "must not" establish mandatory requirements; "should" describes an expected practice unless a documented risk-based exception is approved by the designated control owner and is lawful. No exception may authorize unlawful conduct, retaliation, falsification, bribery, discrimination, or a material unmanaged safety or privacy risk. If the text is unclear, pause the affected activity and seek guidance before acting.

2.2 Decision and escalation test

Before a consequential or uncertain decision, ask: Is it lawful? Does it comply with this policy and the relevant control? Is it fair and safe? Would I be comfortable explaining it accurately to a colleague, customer, regulator, or the public? Have I disclosed the relevant facts and obtained approvals? If any answer is no or uncertain, do not proceed until you have consulted your manager and the appropriate specialist. Record material decisions and approvals in the approved system.

3. Respectful and fair workplace

We provide equal opportunity and make employment decisions based on role-related qualifications, performance, and legitimate business needs. Discrimination, harassment, bullying, intimidation, and retaliation are prohibited. This includes unwelcome conduct based on any characteristic protected by applicable law, as well as conduct that creates an abusive, hostile, or degrading environment.

- Treat colleagues, applicants, customers, and partners with dignity, fairness, and professionalism—in person and through digital channels.
- Do not engage in sexual harassment, unwanted advances, threats, slurs, humiliating conduct, or abusive use of authority.
- Provide reasonable accommodations and accessibility support as required by law and business policy; discuss requests promptly and confidentially with HR.
- Make hiring, pay, promotion, performance, and discipline decisions consistently and without unlawful bias.
- Respect lawful freedom of association, collective bargaining, worker representation, and employee participation rights.

Singularity prohibits forced, bonded, trafficked, or involuntary labor and the unlawful employment of children. Work must be freely chosen, with lawful wages, working time, rest, and employment terms. Report suspected labor exploitation in our operations or supply chain.

3.1 Prevention and response

Managers must address reports promptly, protect affected people from immediate harm, preserve relevant information, and refer complaints to HR or another impartial function. Do not mediate serious allegations informally, promise a specific outcome, retaliate, or treat a complainant less favorably for reporting. HR must assess interim safeguards, conflicts of interest, procedural fairness, and any local consultation or reporting requirement. Findings and corrective actions must be documented with access limited to those who need to know.

3.2 Fair employment decisions and accommodations

Use job-related criteria and consistent evidence for recruitment, pay, scheduling, development, promotion, performance, restructuring, and termination. Decisions must not be based on protected characteristics, protected leave, good-faith complaints, or lawful worker representation. Route accommodation requests promptly to HR, engage in the legally required interactive process, protect medical information, and document the decision and any alternative arrangement. Local law governs protected categories, accommodation duties, and employment procedures.

3.3 Prohibition on exploitative labor

Do not charge workers unlawful recruitment fees, confiscate identity or travel documents, restrict lawful movement, threaten workers, or use misleading contracts to compel work. Workforce and recruitment providers must be vetted for lawful practices. Report credible indicators of child labor, forced labor, trafficking, or serious wage abuse to Procurement, HR, Legal, or Ethics & Compliance immediately; do not alert a suspected perpetrator if doing so could increase risk to a worker.

4. Health, safety, and wellbeing

We work to provide safe, healthy, and secure workplaces. Follow safety procedures, use required protective equipment, complete training, and promptly report hazards, injuries, near misses, violence, or unsafe work. Stop work when there is an imminent risk and notify a manager or safety representative. No one may retaliate against a person who raises a safety concern in good faith.

Threats, physical violence, and possession or use of illegal drugs at work are prohibited. Alcohol or other substances must never impair safe, professional work. Follow emergency, travel, facility, and business-continuity instructions. Managers are responsible for addressing risks and escalating serious incidents without delay.

4.1 Risk control and stop-work authority

Leaders responsible for a site, activity, journey, or event must identify foreseeable hazards, assess risk, implement controls in the legally required order, communicate safe procedures, and provide competent supervision, equipment, and training. Covered Persons must follow those controls and may stop or decline work they reasonably believe presents imminent serious danger, promptly notifying the responsible lead. Work may resume only after an authorized person has reassessed and controlled the risk.

4.2 Incident reporting and emergency readiness

Report injuries, occupational illness, near misses, threats, unsafe equipment, and environmental releases promptly, even when no injury occurred. Seek emergency assistance first where necessary. Managers must arrange required notifications, preserve evidence, investigate root causes proportionately, and track corrective actions to closure. Never conceal or discourage reporting to meet a performance target. Personal health information must be handled confidentially and under applicable law.

4.3 Wellbeing and fitness for work

Managers should address workload, fatigue, psychosocial hazards, travel strain, and workplace isolation through appropriate support and risk controls. Use employee assistance or local wellbeing resources where available. Fitness-for-work decisions must be safety-based, proportionate, confidential, and consistent with disability, privacy, and employment law.

5. Anti-bribery, corruption, and improper influence

We do not offer, promise, give, request, or accept a bribe, kickback, secret commission, or anything of value intended to improperly influence a decision or secure an improper advantage. This rule applies to dealings with public officials and private parties and to direct and indirect conduct through third parties.

- Never make facilitation or “grease” payments, except where an immediate threat to life or safety makes payment unavoidable; report any such payment to Legal and Finance as soon as safe.
- Gifts, meals, travel, entertainment, sponsorships, charitable contributions, and hiring referrals must be lawful, modest, transparent, infrequent, properly recorded, and never offered to influence a decision. Follow local approval limits and stricter customer rules. Cash and cash equivalents are prohibited.
- Obtain required pre-approval before offering anything of value to a government official, state-owned entity representative, or public-sector customer.
- Perform risk-based due diligence and use written agreements for agents, intermediaries, and other representatives. Do not use a third party to do what we cannot do ourselves.

Record all transactions accurately and completely. Never create false entries, undisclosed funds, misleading invoices, or off-book accounts. Escalate requests for unusual payment methods, personal payments, or missing documentation.

5.1 Gifts, hospitality, donations, and sponsorship controls

Before offering or accepting a gift or hospitality, consider purpose, value, frequency, timing, transparency, recipient rules, and whether it could reasonably appear to influence a decision. Obtain required approvals before commitment; record recipient, business purpose, value, date, approver, and funding source in the designated register. Never route a benefit through a family member, charity, event organizer, or other intermediary to evade a control. Decline or return an impermissible benefit where safe and practical and notify Compliance. If return is impracticable, seek written instructions for donation or other disposition.

Political contributions, lobbying, charitable donations, and sponsorships using Company funds or name require documented business purpose, due diligence, Legal/Compliance review, and approval under the delegation of authority. They must never be made in exchange for business, permits, favorable treatment, or a personal benefit. Personal political activity must be lawful, voluntary, undertaken on personal time and resources, and not presented as Company endorsement.

5.2 Third-party and payment controls

Before appointing or renewing an intermediary, verify identity, ownership, qualifications, reputation, beneficial owners where risk warrants, services, compensation, and relevant government connections. Use a written scope, commercially reasonable compensation, accurate invoices, approved bank account, and documented deliverables. Re-screen and monitor according to risk. Escalate unexplained commissions, success fees, offshore or unrelated accounts, cash requests, pass-through payments, or refusal to provide information. Finance must apply segregation of duties and retain evidence of approval and performance.

5.3 Public-sector dealings

Contact with a public official must have a legitimate purpose, be truthful and appropriately documented, and use authorized representatives. Do not provide employment, internships, travel, meals, donations, or anything else of value for an official or related person without prior Compliance approval and local-law review. Follow procurement rules, lobbying-registration obligations, gift restrictions, and cooling-off requirements that apply to the jurisdiction.

6. Conflicts of interest and responsible business decisions

A conflict exists when personal, family, financial, or outside interests could influence—or appear to influence—judgment on Singularity's behalf. Disclose actual, potential, or perceived conflicts promptly to your manager and Ethics & Compliance, before taking action. Do not make or influence a decision in which you have an undisclosed conflict.

Examples include outside employment or directorships, financial interests in a supplier or competitor, close relationships affecting hiring or procurement, use of company opportunities for personal benefit, and accepting benefits from a party seeking company business. A disclosure is not automatically misconduct; the company will assess and document proportionate safeguards. Do not use company property, time, information, or authority for personal gain without written authorization.

6.1 Disclosure and management

Disclose a conflict through the approved process at onboarding, when circumstances change, and at least annually if required. Do so before participating in the affected decision, negotiation, hiring, or payment. The reviewer must be independent of the conflict, assess actual and perceived risk, and record controls such as recusal, reassignment, divestment, independent approval, or prohibition. Update the disclosure when facts change. Silence is not approval.

6.2 Close relationships, outside work, and personal investments

Disclose close personal or family relationships that could affect supervision, recruitment, compensation, contracting, or audit. Do not supervise, evaluate, approve pay for, or make procurement decisions involving a close relation without written safeguards. Obtain approval for outside work or board service that competes, impairs performance, uses Company information or assets, or creates a regulatory or reputational conflict. Do not trade or invest using material non-public information or a business opportunity learned through Company work.

6.3 Procurement fairness

Use objective, documented selection criteria and competitive processes proportionate to risk and value. Disclose relationships with bidders, do not accept personal benefits, protect bids and negotiation information, and require written approval for sole-source decisions or exceptions. A conflicted person must not control evaluation, award, or invoice approval.

7. Fair competition, trade, and financial integrity

Compete vigorously but fairly. Do not agree or coordinate with competitors on prices, bids, customers, territories, wages, production, or other competitively sensitive matters. Do not exchange sensitive information or restrict customers or suppliers unlawfully. Obtain Legal guidance before competitor discussions, industry benchmarking, exclusivity arrangements, or other potentially sensitive conduct.

Comply with applicable export controls, import rules, sanctions, customs, anti-money-laundering, tax, and trade restrictions. Screen relevant transactions and counterparties through approved processes and refer potential matches or unusual activity to Compliance; do not proceed while a legal restriction is unresolved.

Maintain complete, accurate, timely business and financial records. Follow approval limits, expense rules, procurement controls, and retention schedules. Never falsify, destroy, conceal, or improperly alter a record, or pressure another person to do so. Report suspected fraud, theft, money laundering, or accounting irregularities immediately.

7.1 Competitor contact and market information

Do not agree, signal, or coordinate with competitors on prices or pricing intentions, bids, output, capacity, customers, territories, suppliers, hiring, wages, boycotts, or other competitive decisions. If a competitor raises such a topic, clearly object, end the discussion, leave if appropriate, and promptly record and report the interaction to Legal. Use only lawfully obtained, appropriately aggregated market information; Legal must review industry benchmarking or exchanges involving competitively sensitive data.

7.2 Accurate books, approvals, and records

Transactions must be recorded in the correct period, account, entity, and currency, supported by genuine evidence, and approved by an authorized person independent of the preparer where required. No person may approve their own expense, create a false vendor, misstate a transaction, conceal a liability, backdate an approval, or use an undocumented side agreement. Respond truthfully to internal and external audits and regulator requests through authorized channels. Apply legal holds immediately; never destroy records subject to a hold, investigation, audit, or preservation duty.

7.3 Sanctions, export controls, and financial-crime safeguards

Before a covered transaction, follow screening, classification, licensing, end-use, end-user, country, and payment controls. Escalate a potential sanctions match, diversion risk, unusual ownership, suspicious payment, or request to conceal the true party or destination. Do not tip off a person where law prohibits doing so. Only trained, authorized personnel may clear a potential match or approve a controlled transfer. Follow applicable anti-money-laundering, customs, tax, and recordkeeping obligations.

7.4 Tax and public filings

Provide complete and accurate information to tax, customs, regulators, auditors, investors, and public authorities through authorized personnel. Do not evade tax, misclassify workers or transactions to avoid obligations, falsify customs values, or facilitate another party's unlawful conduct. Escalate suspected material reporting errors promptly for correction through approved channels.

8. Privacy, information security, and responsible technology

Collect and use personal information only for legitimate, disclosed, and authorized purposes, with an appropriate legal basis and safeguards. Respect access, correction, deletion, objection, and other rights where applicable. Limit access to people with a business need; protect data in storage and transit; follow retention, cross-border transfer, and breach-response rules. Contact Privacy or Security immediately about suspected loss, unauthorized access, disclosure, or compromise—do not investigate or conceal it yourself.

Protect company, customer, employee, and partner information. Use approved systems, strong authentication, secure devices, and authorized sharing channels. Do not bypass security controls, share credentials, install unapproved software, or use confidential information for personal benefit. Protect intellectual property and respect third-party licenses and rights.

Use artificial intelligence and automated decision tools only in approved ways. Do not enter confidential, personal, regulated, or customer data into public or unapproved AI tools. Verify generated content before relying on or sharing it; assess accuracy, bias, security, privacy, intellectual-property, and safety risks. High-impact decisions about people require approved human oversight and applicable legal review. Do not represent generated or automated output as verified fact without validation.

8.1 Privacy by design and individual rights

Before a new product, event, campaign, monitoring activity, or vendor process collects personal data, define the purpose, minimum necessary fields, lawful basis, notice, access roles, retention period, transfer route, and deletion method. Complete a privacy or data-protection impact assessment when required or when risk is high. Use approved contracts and safeguards for processors and cross-border transfers. Route privacy requests and complaints to the Privacy function within internal deadlines so statutory response periods can be met.

8.2 Security controls and incident escalation

Classify information and apply the approved handling standard. Use unique accounts, multi-factor authentication where available, approved encryption and storage, timely patching, and least-privilege access. Do not forward Company data to personal accounts or removable media unless an approved exception and safeguards exist. Report phishing, lost devices, misdirected email, ransomware, credential exposure, or suspected compromise immediately to Security using the incident channel. Do not delete evidence, negotiate with attackers, or notify affected persons or regulators without authorization; Legal and Privacy coordinate required notices.

8.3 AI, automation, and digital content governance

Before deploying or materially changing an AI system, obtain required product, security, privacy, legal, accessibility, and risk approvals; document its purpose, owner, data, limitations, testing, monitoring, and human override. Prohibit uses barred by applicable law or Company policy. Test for accuracy, robustness, bias, security vulnerabilities, and foreseeable misuse. Give users meaningful notice when required, monitor outcomes, provide an escalation route, and suspend a system when material harm or control failure is suspected. Human reviewers must have authority, competence, and adequate information—not merely rubber-stamp automated output.

8.4 Intellectual property and open-source materials

Use third-party software, datasets, media, and code only under valid permissions and license terms. Obtain required review before adding open-source components, publishing code, training models on third-party materials, or using generated content in a product. Respect employee, customer, supplier, and competitor rights. Report suspected infringement or leakage to Legal promptly.

9. Human rights, environment, and business partners

We respect internationally recognized human rights and seek to identify and address adverse impacts connected to our operations and business relationships. We prohibit forced labor, human trafficking, child labor, discrimination, and unsafe work. We respect lawful worker voice and seek fair, safe working conditions.

We seek to prevent pollution, use resources responsibly, comply with environmental permits, and improve environmental performance where practicable. Report spills, releases, unsafe disposal, or environmental non-compliance promptly.

Choose and manage business partners fairly, based on legitimate criteria such as quality, capability, cost, security, labor and human-rights practices, and environmental responsibility. Follow due-diligence, procurement, sanctions-screening, and contract controls. Raise concerns about supplier misconduct through Procurement, Legal, or Ethics & Compliance.

9.1 Risk-based human-rights due diligence

For significant operations, products, and business relationships, identify salient risks to people, prioritize severe and likely impacts, take steps to prevent or mitigate harm, track effectiveness, and communicate material actions appropriately. Provide accessible grievance routes and avoid impeding lawful access to remedy. Where Singularity caused or contributed to an adverse impact, cooperate in appropriate remediation; where it is directly linked through a business relationship, use leverage and responsible escalation, including suspension or exit where warranted and lawful.

9.2 Supplier onboarding and monitoring

Apply risk-based checks before engagement and during the relationship, considering geography, sector, service, labor model, data access, public-sector exposure, and use of subcontractors. Contracts should address compliance with law, labor and human-rights expectations, safety, privacy and security, audit or information rights proportionate to risk, incident notification, corrective action, and termination for serious or persistent breaches. Do not transfer risk to a supplier while ignoring credible warning signs. Escalate concerns and track corrective-action plans to verified closure.

9.3 Environmental responsibility

Obtain required environmental permits and comply with waste, chemical, water, air-emission, energy, and product-stewardship controls relevant to the activity. Prevent releases, use licensed waste handlers, and maintain required records. Promptly contain and report an environmental incident using emergency procedures. Do not make unsubstantiated environmental claims; substantiate public statements with accurate, current evidence.

10. Company assets, confidentiality, and external communications

Use company funds, devices, facilities, and information responsibly, primarily for authorized business purposes, and protect them from loss, misuse, and theft. Limited personal use may be allowed under local policy, provided it is lawful, secure, does not interfere with work, and creates no material cost or risk. Return assets and records when asked or when your engagement ends.

Protect confidential and proprietary information during and after employment, subject to legal rights to report or disclose protected information. Do not make public statements, commitments, or disclosures on Singularity's behalf unless authorized. Route media, investor, regulator, and public-policy inquiries to designated representatives. On social media, do not disclose confidential information or imply personal views represent the company.

Employees who receive material non-public information about a public company must not trade on it, tip others, or use it for personal benefit. Follow insider-trading rules, blackout periods, and pre-clearance requirements where applicable.

10.1 Confidentiality and information handling

Use confidential information only for an authorized business purpose and share it only with people who need it and are authorized to receive it. Verify recipients before sending, use approved secure transfer methods, honor access restrictions, and apply confidentiality terms before disclosure to a third party. Report misdirected disclosures immediately. These rules do not restrict legally protected whistleblowing, communications with regulators, union activity, protected labor discussions, or other rights that cannot lawfully be waived.

10.2 Public statements and external requests

Only designated spokespersons may issue Company statements or respond on behalf of Singularity to media, investors, regulators, law enforcement, or public officials. Forward requests promptly to Communications, Investor Relations, or Legal. Never speculate, destroy a request, or make an unauthorized commitment. Employees remain responsible for lawful personal expression but must not disclose confidential information or falsely imply Company endorsement.

10.3 Insider information and trading

Material non-public information may include unpublished financial results, acquisitions, product launches, major customer or supplier contracts, leadership changes, cybersecurity incidents, or significant litigation. If you may possess such information, do not trade, recommend trading, or share it except as authorized for a legitimate need to know. Ask Legal or the designated securities-law contact before acting if uncertain; trading windows do not authorize trading while in possession of material non-public information.

10.4 Records, monitoring, and return of assets

Create and retain business records in approved systems under the retention schedule and litigation-hold instructions. Company access, monitoring, and device management must be transparent where required and proportionate, with local privacy and labor-law safeguards. At exit or request, return Company equipment, credentials, records, and information; do not retain copies unless Legal authorizes retention or applicable law protects the individual's possession or disclosure.

11. Corporate events, hospitality, and work-related gatherings

This section applies to any event organized, funded, sponsored, hosted, or endorsed by Singularity, and to work-related attendance at events organized by others. It covers office celebrations and parties; holiday, milestone, and team events; offsites, retreats, and team-building; town halls and all-hands meetings; conferences, trade shows, exhibitions, and training; customer, supplier, investor, recruiting, and government events; award ceremonies, meals, receptions, and hospitality; volunteer and community events; online, virtual, and hybrid events; and associated travel, accommodation, transport, and after-hours activities. It applies to employees and, as appropriate, attendees, guests, speakers, contractors, and event partners. Company-sponsored conduct rules continue during work-related travel and at any officially connected after-event activity.

11.1 Planning, approval, and accountability

- Every event must have a named business sponsor and event lead accountable for approval, budget, participant communications, risk controls, and close-out. For higher-risk events, assign a safety lead and a designated incident decision-maker with authority to pause or stop the event.
- Obtain required management, Finance, Procurement, Legal, Security, Safety, HR, Privacy, and Communications approvals before committing funds or publicizing the event. Follow purchasing, delegation-of-authority, anti-bribery, gift, travel, and expense controls. Do not split purchases to avoid approval limits.
- Scale planning to the event’s size, location, activities, audience, and foreseeable risks. Before approval, document a proportionate risk assessment and controls covering the venue, crowd capacity and movement, accessibility, fire and evacuation, medical response, severe weather, food and allergens, alcohol or other substances, security, travel, contractors, privacy, and emergency communications.

- Use venues and vendors that are competent, legally permitted, appropriately insured, and able to demonstrate relevant safety, safeguarding, accessibility, and security arrangements. Put responsibilities, service levels, emergency roles, insurance, cancellation, data protection, and incident notification in writing where appropriate. Coordinate with the venue and event partners; clearly define responsibility when control is shared.
- Obtain permits, licenses, approvals, and insurance required by local law. Do not proceed when a material safety risk is unresolved or a required approval is missing. Reassess when attendance, venue, schedule, entertainment, weather, or other significant event conditions change.

11.2 Inclusion, respectful conduct, and safeguarding

- Events are an extension of the workplace. This policy's rules on respect, equal opportunity, anti-harassment, non-discrimination, safety, conflicts, gifts, privacy, and non-retaliation apply to event planning and conduct, including digital chats and informal or after-hours activities officially connected to the event.
- Set and communicate clear expected conduct, a named contact for help, and a discreet reporting route before the event. Event staff must respond promptly to concerns, protect immediate safety, and refer reports to HR, Security, or Ethics & Compliance. Do not promise absolute confidentiality or conduct informal investigations.
- Plan accessible venues, formats, communications, seating, transport, food options, and reasonable accommodations. Invite participants to request accommodation through a private channel and share only the details necessary to implement it. Provide meaningful non-alcoholic options and inclusive food choices.
- Attendance at social or alcohol-serving activities is voluntary. Do not pressure people to attend, drink, disclose personal information, join entertainment, or participate in activities that conflict with disability, health, religion, culture, caregiving, or other personal needs. Provide an equivalent professional way to participate in essential work content.
- Use extra safeguards for events involving minors or vulnerable people: obtain required parental or guardian consent and local approvals; use vetted, authorized personnel where required; maintain appropriate supervision, check-in/out, photography, transport, and safeguarding arrangements; and avoid unsupervised one-to-one situations. Follow applicable child-protection and privacy laws.

11.3 Alcohol, substances, and hospitality

- Alcohol is never required for attendance, networking, celebration, or career participation. No employee may pressure, tease, reward, or disadvantage another person based on drinking or abstaining.
- Serving alcohol requires prior approval and compliance with local licensing and age laws. Use a licensed and responsible provider where required, control service, provide appealing non-alcoholic beverages and food, and stop service to anyone who appears impaired. Do not serve alcohol to underage attendees, drive participants to drink, or permit self-service arrangements that cannot be safely controlled.
- Company funds must not be used for excessive or unapproved alcohol, illegal drugs, or entertainment that is unlawful, degrading, discriminatory, sexually explicit, or inconsistent with this policy. Illegal drug use or possession remains prohibited. Follow stricter country, client, venue, and safety-sensitive-work rules.
- Arrange safe transport and accommodation options in advance when alcohol is served or travel creates risk. No one may drive or operate equipment while impaired. Reimburse reasonable approved safe transport under expense rules. Do not allow an intoxicated person to leave alone when there is a foreseeable safety concern; contact the event lead or emergency services as needed.
- Meals, gifts, tickets, entertainment, travel, and accommodation for customers, suppliers, officials, or other external attendees remain subject to anti-bribery rules, value limits, disclosure, pre-approval, and accurate expense records. Never offer a benefit to influence procurement, regulatory, hiring, or other decisions.

11.4 Safety, security, and incident response

- Confirm safe venue capacity, entrances and exits, accessible evacuation routes, crowd flow, fire precautions, first-aid coverage, emergency contacts, and a clear way to communicate alerts. For larger or higher-risk events, brief staff, contractors, speakers, and volunteers on their assigned roles and run an appropriate readiness check.
- Assess event-specific hazards such as temporary stages and structures, rigging, electrical equipment, vehicles, demonstrations, physical activities, water, heat or cold, severe weather, food preparation, and crowd surges. Use qualified people and inspected equipment; restrict access to hazardous work areas. Do not improvise with unapproved structures, pyrotechnics, weapons, or hazardous materials.
- Use proportionate security and privacy-respecting access controls. Collect only necessary attendee information, restrict access, secure guest lists, and agree how vendors may use or retain data. Establish procedures for lost children, disruptive conduct, threats, medical emergencies, evacuations, and reunification where relevant.
- Anyone may alert the event lead to an imminent risk. The event lead or safety lead must pause, modify, evacuate, or cancel activities when necessary to protect people. Call local emergency services when there is immediate danger, then notify the company incident-response contacts. Preserve relevant records and report injuries, near misses, threats, harassment, security breaches, and other incidents promptly through company channels.

11.5 Travel, virtual events, and follow-up

Work-related event travel must follow travel, expense, immigration, safety, accessibility, and security policies. Use approved booking and transport arrangements; provide itinerary and emergency contact information through approved channels; and conduct additional assessment for higher-risk destinations or activities. Event-related conduct expectations apply on flights, in hotels, at meals, and in work-related online spaces.

Virtual and hybrid events must use approved platforms and reasonable security settings. Tell attendees whether sessions are recorded, the purpose, access, retention, and any available participation alternatives before recording. Obtain required consent and permissions for recording, photography, streaming, music, presentations, and reuse; honor applicable rights to opt out. Do not publish attendee lists, images, chat content, or personal information without authorization and an appropriate legal basis.

After each significant event, reconcile expenses and gifts, close vendor payments, report incidents, securely retain or dispose of event data under the retention schedule, and record lessons learned. Review and improve controls after a serious incident or material near miss.

11.6 Event lead pre-event checklist

Before confirming	Before opening doors / going live	At close-out
Named sponsor and event lead; budget and approvals; venue/vendor due diligence and written responsibilities; permits and insurance; documented risk assessment; accessible format and accommodation route; audience and safeguarding plan; alcohol, gifts, and hospitality approvals; travel and emergency arrangements.	Capacity and exits checked; first-aid and emergency contacts confirmed; responsible alcohol service and safe transport available if relevant; staff/contractor briefing complete; reporting contact visible; access/security controls active; recording and privacy notices displayed; incident lead reachable; stop/pause authority understood.	Account for attendees where appropriate; arrange safe departures; escalate incidents and preserve evidence; reconcile expenses and gifts; close supplier actions; protect or delete personal data under schedule; document lessons, remediation, and required follow-up.

12. Speak up, investigations, and non-retaliation

Raise concerns promptly if you suspect a violation, unsafe condition, fraud, discrimination, harassment, retaliation, privacy or security incident, or other misconduct. You may speak to your manager, another leader, HR, Legal, Ethics & Compliance, or use the designated reporting channel:

Reporting route	Organization to complete before launch
Confidential reporting hotline / web portal	[Insert provider, country-specific numbers and URL]
Ethics & Compliance contact	[Insert monitored email / office contact]
Urgent safety or security incident	[Insert emergency and incident-response contacts]

Reports may be made anonymously where permitted by local law and the reporting system. Provide as much factual detail as possible. We will assess reports promptly, impartially, and with appropriate confidentiality; access is limited to those who need it. We will protect the fairness and rights of everyone involved. Do not conduct your own interviews, destroy evidence, or interfere with a review. Cooperate truthfully with authorized investigations and preserve relevant records.

Retaliation is strictly prohibited against anyone who raises a concern in good faith, seeks advice, refuses an improper instruction, participates in an investigation, or exercises a protected legal right. Retaliation should itself be reported and may result in discipline. Knowingly fabricated allegations or deliberate interference may also result in discipline; an unsubstantiated report made honestly is not misconduct.

12.1 Intake and triage

Reports should be routed promptly to a channel capable of independent review. The recipient must document the date, source, nature, urgency, immediate safety needs, conflict checks, and next owner, while limiting personal data to what is necessary. Allegations involving senior leaders, Legal, HR, Compliance, or the normal reporting owner must be escalated to an independent Board-designated contact or external investigator under the approved protocol. Emergency services and protective steps take priority when life or safety is at immediate risk.

12.2 Fair and independent investigations

Investigations must be authorized, timely, impartial, proportionate, and conducted by trained people free of conflicts. The investigator should define scope, preserve relevant records, interview appropriate witnesses, assess evidence consistently, and give affected persons a fair opportunity to respond where appropriate. Findings should use the standard established by the investigation protocol and local law. Maintain a restricted case file documenting steps, evidence, findings, rationale, and any referral. Do not promise a particular outcome or disclose more than necessary.

12.3 Outcomes, remediation, and feedback

The authorized decision-maker, not the investigator where practicable, determines proportionate action based on evidence, seriousness, intent, harm, prior conduct, consistency, and law. Actions may include control improvements, training, recovery of loss, disciplinary measures, contract remedies, or referral to authorities where appropriate. Track remediation to closure and consider root causes beyond individual conduct. Where safe and legally permitted, acknowledge the report and provide appropriate status or closure information without disclosing confidential personnel or investigation details.

12.4 Cooperation and preservation

Covered Persons must cooperate honestly with authorized reviews, preserve relevant records and devices, and promptly disclose potential conflicts with an investigation. Do not coach witnesses, retaliate, alert a subject improperly, alter records, or obstruct a lawful authority. Contact Legal immediately if you receive a subpoena, regulator inquiry, or law-enforcement request; follow the preservation instructions and do not respond on behalf of Singularity unless authorized.

12.5 Confidentiality and lawful reporting

Confidentiality is protected to the extent practicable and permitted by law, but cannot be guaranteed where disclosure is needed for a fair investigation, safety, legal process, or regulatory reporting. Nothing in this policy requires prior Company permission to contact a regulator, report suspected legal violations, participate in a protected proceeding, or make a disclosure protected by law. Follow local rules on anonymous reporting, employee-representative consultation, data access, and investigation time limits.

13. Responsibilities, training, and consequences

- Everyone: Know and follow this policy, complete assigned training, disclose conflicts, protect records, and speak up.
- Managers: Model ethical conduct, make it safe to ask questions, act on concerns, prevent retaliation, and escalate issues without delay.
- Ethics & Compliance, Legal, HR, Privacy, Security, Finance, and Safety: Maintain supporting controls and guidance, advise on concerns, and investigate or coordinate matters within their responsibilities.
- Executive leadership and the Board or delegated committee: Provide oversight, adequate resources, and periodic review of significant risks and program effectiveness.

Singularity will provide role-appropriate training and may require periodic acknowledgment. Violations may result in proportionate corrective action, up to and including termination of employment or contract, subject to applicable law and fair process. Serious matters may be referred to regulators or law enforcement where appropriate. No manager may waive legal obligations or authorize a violation of this policy.

13.1 Control owners and lines of responsibility

The Board or delegated committee oversees significant ethics and compliance risks and receives appropriate reporting. Executive leadership provides resources and sets expectations. The policy owner maintains this document and coordinates the program. Functional control owners maintain procedures, approvals, training, monitoring, and records in their domains. Managers implement controls in their teams. Internal Audit or another independent assurance function may test design and operation; it must have appropriate independence and access.

13.2 Training and attestations

All Covered Persons must complete onboarding and periodic policy training. Additional role-based training is required for higher-risk roles, including procurement, sales, government engagement, finance, people management, security, privacy, event management, and third-party oversight. Completion and acknowledgments must be recorded. Leaders must check understanding and provide guidance, not rely solely on an annual click-through attestation.

13.3 Consequences and consistency

Disciplinary and contractual outcomes must be consistent, proportionate, documented, and reviewed for applicable labor rights, due process, collective agreements, and local law. Seniority or business performance does not excuse misconduct. Managers who ignore, conceal, direct, or retaliate over a violation may be held accountable. Good-faith reporting, a mistake promptly disclosed, or an honest question is not itself misconduct.

13.4 Program monitoring and escalation

Control owners should monitor training, disclosures, third-party due diligence, event approvals, reports, investigation timeliness, substantiation patterns, incidents, remediation, and repeat findings using lawful, privacy-respecting measures. Material control failures and significant trends must be escalated to executive leadership and, where appropriate, the Board or delegated committee. Use data to improve prevention and controls, not to suppress reporting or set unsafe incentives.

14. Administration and review

Ethics & Compliance owns this policy and coordinates review with Legal, HR, Privacy, Security, Finance, Procurement, Safety, and local leaders. Review at least annually, after significant incidents, and when laws, operations, or risk profiles materially change. Maintain local supplements, approvals, training records, reports, investigation records, and remediation evidence under applicable retention and privacy rules.

14.1 Exceptions and local supplements

Any exception must be narrowly scoped, documented, time-limited, supported by a risk assessment, and approved in writing by the policy owner and relevant control owner, with Legal review where legal rights or obligations may be affected. Exceptions must identify compensating controls and an expiry or review date. No exception may waive law, non-retaliation, anti-bribery, accurate-recordkeeping, or immediate safety duties. Local supplements may impose stricter standards but must be reviewed for consistency with this global baseline and local mandatory rights.

14.2 Document control and records

The policy owner must maintain the approved version, change history, approval record, publication date, translations, and local supplements in the controlled policy repository. Superseded versions must be archived according to the retention schedule. If this policy conflicts with a more specific approved procedure, comply with law and consult the policy owner; do not assume a less protective standard applies.

Related documents to establish or align: Anti-bribery and gifts; conflicts of interest; respectful workplace and anti-harassment; grievance and whistleblowing; investigation protocol; privacy and records retention; information security and incident response; AI use and governance; workplace safety; travel and event management; alcohol service; supplier code and due diligence; competition law; trade sanctions/export controls; financial controls; political contributions; insider trading; and local employment handbooks.

15. Policy implementation and acknowledgment

15.1 Approval and effective date

This policy becomes binding as Company policy only after approval by the authorized governing body or executive under Singularity's governance arrangements. The approved version must identify the approving authority, approval date, effective date, policy owner, and review date. Until approval, this document is a draft baseline and does not replace existing law, contracts, employee handbooks, or approved procedures.

Approval record: Approving authority: [complete] | Approval date: [complete] | Effective date: [complete]

15.2 Launch and operational readiness

Before the effective date, the policy owner and relevant functional leaders must ensure that the controls necessary to implement this policy are operational. This includes assigning named owners and deputies; publishing current reporting and emergency contacts; implementing an impartial investigation and escalation protocol; setting approval authorities and registers; establishing required training; enabling accessible communication and applicable translations; putting appropriate supplier and event terms in place; and providing secure systems for disclosures, records, and incidents. Unfilled contact or approval fields must be completed before publication to affected personnel.

15.3 Local legal review and supplements

Legal and the responsible local leaders must identify mandatory local rules and worker consultation obligations before rollout in each jurisdiction. They must issue a local supplement where necessary for employment rights, privacy, data transfers, protected reporting, investigations, anti-bribery, competition, sanctions, tax, accessibility, workplace safety, permits, alcohol, or event operations. A supplement may add protections or clarify local requirements; any apparent conflict must be referred to Legal and the policy owner before the affected conduct proceeds. No translation or summary may remove a protection or create a broader legal restriction than the approved policy without review.

15.4 Communication, training, and acknowledgment

The Company must make the approved policy available in an accessible format and in languages needed for the covered workforce, explain where to seek help, and give personnel a reasonable opportunity to ask questions. Covered Persons must complete assigned training and acknowledge receipt and understanding when requested. Acknowledgment confirms receipt and commitment to comply; it does not waive statutory rights, collective rights, or protected disclosures, and does not replace training or functioning controls. Managers must reinforce expectations during onboarding and team operations.

Employee acknowledgment: I acknowledge that I have received or been given access to the Singularity Global Business Conduct Policy, understand my responsibility to follow it and raise concerns, and know where to seek guidance. I understand that this acknowledgment does not limit rights protected by applicable law.

15.5 Monitoring and periodic review

The policy owner must coordinate at least annual review and an earlier review after a material legal change, business expansion, significant event or incident, audit finding, or demonstrated control weakness. Control owners must provide proportionate evidence that assigned controls operate effectively. Reviews must consider workforce feedback, accessibility, reporting-channel trust, investigation timeliness, repeat issues, third-party risks, event incidents, and corrective-action closure. Material weaknesses and overdue remediation must be escalated to executive leadership and, where appropriate, the Board or delegated committee.

15.6 Document integrity and interpretation

The controlled repository version is authoritative. Only the policy owner or authorized delegate may issue revisions. Superseded copies must be withdrawn from active distribution and retained only as required for records management. If this policy, a translation, a local supplement, or a related procedure appears inconsistent, promptly seek guidance from Legal and the policy owner; comply with mandatory law and do not use the inconsistency to avoid a protective requirement.
