SINGULARITY

Event Vendor & Venue Policy

Planning, selection, safety and facility verification

Purpose: Establish consistent controls for corporate parties, annual functions, team outings, team-building activities, meals, conferences, and small or large group gatherings.

Policy owner: Procurement and People Operations, with Ethics & Compliance oversight

Version: 1.0 | Effective date: Upon approval

Applies to: All Singularity personnel, event sponsors, organizers, and business units arranging or paying for work-related events.

Approval: [Authorized approver / date to be completed before adoption]

Internal policy draft. Vendor descriptions and locations below were supplied by the requester. Facilities, operating status, service scope, prices, and capacities have not been independently confirmed. Verify in writing with each vendor before relying on them.

1. Policy and principles

Singularity may hold inclusive, safe, accessible, and well-managed events that support legitimate business purposes and employee connection. Every event must respect people, protect health and safety, use company funds responsibly, comply with law, and preserve the Company's reputation. Attendance at social activities is voluntary. No event, budget, venue booking, or vendor relationship is automatically approved by this document or by appearing in its vendor directory.

This policy supplements the Singularity Global Business Conduct Policy and applicable local safety, employment, privacy, procurement, travel, anti-bribery, and expense requirements. Where requirements conflict or are unclear, pause the affected arrangement and consult Procurement, Safety, Legal, HR, or Ethics & Compliance. Applicable law and venue occupancy rules always take precedence over internal planning estimates.

2. Event types and planning size

Event class	Typical examples	Minimum planning approach
Work meal / small gathering	Team lunch, dinner, recognition meal, small meeting	Approved spend; dietary and accessibility needs; safe transport; vendor/venue checks; attendee privacy.

Activity / team-building	Games, trampoline or amusement activities, facilitated team exercises	Activity-specific risk assessment; participant suitability and informed briefing; trained supervision; emergency and first-aid arrangements; safe alternatives.
Corporate party / annual event	Celebration, awards, seasonal event, employee party	Named event lead; conduct and harassment reporting route; accessibility; alcohol controls; crowd and security planning; safe travel.
Large or bulk gathering	Town hall, conference, all-hands, multi-team event, public-facing function	Written capacity evidence; venue and crowd plan; emergency and evacuation coordination; qualified event and safety leads; required permits, insurance, and security.
Offsite / multi-day / external-facing	Retreat, customer or supplier event, exhibition, event involving travel	All applicable controls above, plus travel and destination assessment, third-party due diligence, contract and data review, and approvals for external hospitality.

For internal planning, an event with 1–50 attendees is a small gathering, 51–150 is medium, 151–500 is large, and more than 500 is a mass gathering. These are planning triggers only—not legal thresholds, venue capacities, or permission to exceed stricter requirements. The event lead must use the lowest applicable limit imposed by the venue, fire authority, permit, insurer, law, or risk assessment.

3. Roles and approval

- Business sponsor: Confirms business purpose, audience, budget owner, and expected outcome; authorizes the event within delegated authority.
- Event lead: Coordinates planning, documented risk assessment, accessibility and participant communications, vendor coordination, day-of command, incident escalation, and close-out.
- Procurement: Conducts required sourcing and due diligence, checks conflicts and vendor status, approves commercial terms, and ensures purchase orders and contract controls are in place.
- Safety / Security: Reviews activity and venue risk, emergency response, security, crowd management, and stop-work arrangements proportionate to the event.
- HR / People Operations: Advises on inclusion, respectful conduct, accommodation, safeguarding, and employee concerns.
- Legal, Privacy, Finance, and Ethics & Compliance: Review matters in their remit, including permits, contracts, personal data, expenses, alcohol, public officials, gifts, and higher-risk suppliers.

Written approval is required before committing Company funds, signing a contract, announcing the event, or inviting external parties. Approval must match the spend authority and risk tier. Higher-risk events require documented functional review. No organizer may split purchases to avoid a threshold or represent a potential supplier as approved before Procurement confirms status.

4. Vendor selection and due diligence

1. Define the event purpose, format, expected headcount, date, service scope, accessibility needs, budget, and required venue facilities.
2. Use fair sourcing and evaluate capability, total cost, safety, service quality, accessibility, insurance, permits, data practices, reputation, conflicts, and relevant labor and human-rights practices. Record the rationale for selection and any exception.
3. Verify legal identity, ownership where risk warrants, current address, authorized representative, bank/payment details, references, licenses, insurance, and competent staffing. Apply sanctions and other screening required by Singularity processes.
4. Obtain a written proposal and contract or booking terms that cover scope, deliverables, itemized fees and taxes, attendance and capacity, payment milestones, cancellation/refund, substitution, insurance, safety duties, emergency contacts, incident notification, privacy/security, photography, subcontracting, accessibility, and dispute/termination rights.

5. Do not pay personal accounts, unexplained intermediaries, cash, or a different entity from the contracting party without documented Finance and Procurement approval. Require invoices and evidence of delivery; gifts, commissions, referral fees, or hospitality must follow the Company anti-bribery policy.
6. Reconfirm the booking, headcount, final layout, restrictions, facility availability, and emergency arrangements before the event. Record material changes and obtain re-approval where scope, risk, or cost changes.

> Directory disclaimer: The vendors listed in section 10 are potential vendor leads only, based on information provided by the requester. Listing does not mean Singularity has audited, contacted, verified, selected, approved, or endorsed a vendor. It does not establish that a vendor currently operates, provides a stated service, owns a venue, or offers any facility.

5. Venue and facilities verification

Do not infer facilities from a vendor name, category, mall address, online listing, or previous event. Before booking, ask the venue or service provider to confirm the specific facilities in writing for the requested date and event format. Visit or conduct a live walkthrough for large, higher-risk, or unfamiliar venues.

Facility / evidence	Confirm before contract
Capacity and layout	Maximum permitted occupancy and proposed seated, standing, dining, activity, stage, and accessible layouts; usable area; concurrent activity limits; signed floor plan; setup and teardown windows.
Emergency and life safety	Valid approvals/permits as applicable; exits and accessible egress; fire alarms and extinguishers; evacuation and assembly point; emergency lighting; first aid / medical arrangements; venue emergency lead; incident notification protocol.
Accessibility and inclusion	Step-free entrance and routes, accessible toilets and seating, lifts where applicable, accommodation process, accessible parking/transport, quiet space, and any restrictions.
Food and beverage	Kitchen/food-service capability, menus, allergens and dietary controls, drinking water, hygiene arrangements, outside-food rules, food-service hours, alcohol license and service controls if relevant.
Technology and event production	Power supply and backup, lighting, sound, microphones, screens/projectors, Wi-Fi, staging/rigging permissions, internet capacity, recording/streaming, technical support, and equipment inspection.
Transport and site operations	Address and access, parking capacity/fees, drop-off, public transport, safe late-night transport, loading access, security and access controls, cloakroom, housekeeping, waste management, and weather contingency.
Commercial and legal	Written quotation, taxes and all fees, deposit and refund/cancellation, insurance, required permits, restrictions, vendor/subcontractor identity, data handling, photography, and signed terms.

The event lead must keep a dated facility confirmation checklist and copies of supporting evidence with the booking record. If a critical facility is unavailable or cannot be confirmed, modify the event, find an alternative, or cancel; do not rely on an assumption or verbal assurance for a material safety requirement.

6. Group gatherings, parties, and activity controls

6.1 Large and bulk gatherings

For large, public-facing, or bulk gatherings, establish an event command structure and written crowd and emergency plan with the venue. Assign a lead for safety, first aid, security, accessibility, and communications as appropriate. Confirm ticketing or registration controls, entry and exit flows, queue management, occupancy monitoring, lost-person response, weather plans, emergency-services access, and reunification arrangements where relevant. Never oversell the lawful or approved capacity. Pause entry or the program if safe limits, exits, or controls are compromised.

6.2 Corporate parties and annual events

Communicate the voluntary nature of attendance and expected respectful conduct. Provide non-alcoholic options, accessible participation and food choices, a private way to request accommodation, named event contacts, and a discreet concern-reporting channel. Entertainment must be lawful, inclusive, non-degrading, and suitable for the audience. Do not require employees to socialize, drink, perform, or attend after-hours activities as a condition of employment, advancement, or belonging.

6.3 Games, amusement, and physical activities

Obtain activity-specific safety rules, age/height/health restrictions, participant-to-supervisor ratios, trained operator confirmation, equipment inspection/maintenance evidence, protective equipment, emergency stop procedures, first-aid coverage, and incident records or reporting process. Participants must receive understandable instructions and may opt out without penalty. Provide a non-physical alternative. Do not use an activity if safety requirements, staffing competence, or emergency response are inadequate.

6.4 Meals, food, alcohol, and safe departure

Collect dietary and allergy information only when needed, restrict access, share it with the caterer only as necessary, and confirm allergen cross-contact controls. Alcohol requires prior approval, lawful licensing, responsible service, food and non-alcoholic drinks, no service to underage or impaired people, and safe transport options. No one may drive or operate equipment while impaired. Follow stricter local law, customer rules, and Company safety policies.

6.5 Photography and personal information

Tell attendees about registration data, photography, recording, streaming, and intended use before collection. Obtain required legal basis, notice, consent, releases, and permissions; respect opt-outs and provide a no-photography method where practicable. Share attendee lists and accommodation details only with authorized personnel and approved vendors on a need-to-know basis. Delete or retain event data under the records schedule.

7. Contract, payment, and event close-out

Only authorized signatories may accept vendor terms. Contracting must be completed before services begin except for a documented emergency exception approved under Company rules. The event lead must verify delivered services against the order; Finance must match invoice, approval, and proof of delivery. Disclose and register external hospitality, gifts, or government attendees under the relevant policy. Report incidents promptly and preserve relevant information. After the event, reconcile expenses, close vendor actions, delete or retain event data appropriately, evaluate performance, and record lessons and corrective actions.

8. Incident response and stop-event authority

Any attendee or worker may promptly alert the event lead to imminent danger. The event lead or safety lead has authority to stop activity, pause entry, shelter, evacuate, or cancel when needed to protect people. Contact local emergency services for immediate danger, then notify Singularity's designated contacts. Report injuries, near misses, harassment, threats, lost persons, food/allergy incidents, security or privacy breaches, and vendor failures through Company channels. Protect affected people, avoid retaliation, do not conduct informal investigations, and preserve relevant records.

9. Vendor-specific profiles and facility confirmation

The profiles below separate requester-provided information from facilities that remain to be confirmed. "Potential event use" is a planning category, not verification of vendor capability. None of these entries confirms capacity, availability, current operations, amenities, suitability, or approval status.

11. Records, exceptions, and review

Retain event purpose and approval, risk assessment, vendor due diligence, quotations, contract, facility confirmations, attendance and incident records, expenses, and close-out review under Company retention and privacy schedules. Exceptions must be written, time-limited, supported by compensating controls, and approved by the policy owner and relevant control functions. No exception may waive legal obligations, anti-bribery controls, non-retaliation, or immediate safety requirements.

Procurement and People Operations will review this policy at least annually and after material incidents, legal changes, vendor failures, or audit findings. Vendor information and facilities should be reconfirmed for each booking; this directory is not a substitute for current due diligence.
